View attachment 31127 Q: How to put the condition inside the decorator to avoid being None I tried to put the condition inside the decorator. That will make the decorator work to check is the result right or wrong. But the result is None, for example: class decorator_demo(object): def __init__(self, func): self.func = func def __call__(self, *args, kwargs): if result in self.__dict__: print self.func(*args, kwargs) print "==== Result "+self.result else: print "No result" print "==== before return" return self.func(*args, kwargs) result = property(lambda self:None) decorator_demo(add) The result: print add(5, 7) ===== Result 15 ===== before return ===== Result None How can I make the result to be 15? A: This should work: class decorator_demo(object): def __init__(self, func): self.func = func def __call__(self, *args, kwargs): result = self.func(*args, kwargs) if result in self.__dict__: print self.func(*args, kwargs) print "==== Result "+result else: print "No result" print "==== before return" return
