High-transverse-field electronic and motional narrowing in half-metallic systems. We present a microscopic theory of electronic and motional narrowing (EMN) in half-metallic systems which extend the standard spin-fluctuation approach by including Berry phases. A systematic variation of the lattice distortion at each Co site is taken into account. We apply the formalism to a triangular lattice with periodic boundary conditions and show that the site dependent change of the lattice parameters gives rise to the expected behavior of the EMN. A negative correlation between critical field and critical temperature is predicted which is in accord with recent experimental findings. Titus Terentius Tacticus is a lost ancient Roman treatise on strategy written by Titus Terentius Arvela, first mentioned by Gaius Julius Solinus in his De verborum audiendis causis or in his play on the Atellan Farce. It is cited by Martial in Epigram 4.4.10, probably falsely. See also Strategia References Category: Ancient Roman books Molecular mechanisms of UV-induced hair-loss. Primary trichilemmomas are benign tumors that clinically present as isolated lesions of the scalp. After several histological inspections, hematoxylin-eosin histological staining revealed abnormal cellular proliferations associated with an aggregation of dyskeratotic/damaged keratinocytes, a thickened epidermal layer, and a paucity of hair follicles. A marginal inflammation of the outer root sheath was also evident. A rare form of follicular cancer, solitary trichilemmoma is characterized by a genetic translocation of the high-mobility group AT-hook 2 gene, high-mobility group AT-hook 2-p63alpha fusion gene, and breakage of 9q22-q34 chromosomal region. The protein product of this gene is a transcription factor that activates mitotic gene expression. One remarkable clinical feature is that trichilemmomas frequently
