founding Slate magazine. Early life and education Jeanine Daniels was born in 1958 in Fayetteville, North Carolina, and grew up in the Washington area. She is a graduate of William and Mary, where she studied philosophy. Career In the late 1980s, Daniels was working for a Southern California publisher when she met David Mimran, editor-in-chief of The Harvard Lampoon. Mimran encouraged her to move to Boston, and in 1990, Daniels joined The Harvard Lampoon as a writer and copy editor.

Daniels moved to The Boston Phoenix as a senior writer in 1993, and in 1995, she helped start Slate magazine. As Slate's first web editor, Daniels began using the Internet to disseminate the magazine. Her work on Slate led to an Emmy Award nomination in the "On-Camera Achievement" category in 1998. After leaving Slate in 2002, Daniels started The Mischief for a Few Notes, a blog that examines sexual harassment in the workplace. Daniels began working for The Boston Globe in 2008 as a contributing writer. References Category:1958 births Category:Living people Category:American women journalists Category:Women magazine editors Category:American bloggers Category
