Game Description

Play through three quarantines and get to grips with agile gameplay, labyrinths and resource management, requiring you to get back on board in order to complete the ride to safety - the A-Train is leaving the station! Use your feet to explore the Panic-Prone universe and discover where the lifeboat is/isn't - but watch it closely. Accurately take pressure readings from the train's passengers and decide on the best time to open the emergency doors. Collect essential items for passing time such as band-aids, painkillers and food as you travel further and further from your destination. When you've made it off the train and onto dry land, rinse and repeat - just don't cross the tracks this time!

IMPORTANT MESSAGE "As the owner of a railroad company in the early 1900s, you're challenged with developing a major region on the frontier. While relaxing by your home station in the town of Red Rock, you receive a letter from a family of unusual explorers. The letter reads: "Our father was a railroad contractor and explorer who traveled the world and built many bridges and tunnels. He recently passed away, and he left us a legacy. We've always wanted to visit the grandeur of Yellowstone National Park, and our father would have loved to see it too. We have a railroad line nearby, and we hope you would consider giving us a hand with the project. Unfortunately, because we have no funds, we do not have the tools, and the commissioner of the railroad says that we don't even own the right to build a station there. But we are a family of explorers and adventurers, and we believe there's nothing we can't overcome with our father's legacy. We know we won't get rich from this, but we hope we can help make a difference in the future. It'll be our tribute to our father." This is not your typical letter, but such a sincere request is hard to refuse. Still, you feel you cannot open this project to your associates. That would be giving in. However, you know it is your duty to help these people. So, you decide to visit the exotic Far West and start planning your trip. In doing so, you get in touch with the owners of this line of railroad, and since they're equally eager to see the park, the two of you decide to start the construction of a station in the middle of the frontier. The commissioners of your company are happy to help the adventurers. Soon, you have a new home station and a great story to tell your friends. In the course of a few years, you manage to make the plans for the station in Red Rock a reality. When your friends go on their next trip to the Far West, they arrive at your brand new station. This time, they are greeted with warm greetings from the local workers of the railway. Excited to see the grand city under construction, your colleagues ask a lot of questions regarding your undertaking. In addition to the new station, you also start planning the construction of a tunnel to go across the forest from the station. If you build this tunnel, it will shorten the route of the railway from the Red Rock to Yellowstone National Park. A lot of visitors to the

Photo Caption Contest 2 Submitted by Thomas L. Finch Description I am looking for a couple more A-Train fans to join my Flickr Photostream page and join me in a Train-A-Palooza! Photo Caption contest! It's really easy to enter, so join up with me before I send the first train rolling...(As of 10/29/07: I have selected 1 winner from the entries submitted.) I sincerely hope they were all added the correct name to my Flickr Photostream. Your Caption/Answer for the 3 photos will be: 1. "Now that I've seen all the trains up close in person, I bet they look a lot better on paper!" 2. "Boy do I love trains, but it's been more than 20 years since I was last on one!" 3. "My kids are really enjoying this coaster ride at Six Flags Frisco in Texas -- the whole family loves to come on this ride! -- but I think I'll order one for myself and ride it here at The A Train!" Winners: The Three Honorable Mentions that placed within the top three. The icons used in the # marks the rankings in the below image. The first third of the images are ranked higher than the second third based on your answer. (It would have been nice to have a ranking in spaces, but as many of us have indicated earlier, the space is filled with a pirate or an alien or some other disturbing element, but it is still safe to take a look...). Please send an email address and check your Flickr Photostream to let me know that you got the correct answer added. Congratulations to the three winners (in sequence, as they happened to be ranked higher): 3rd Place Winner: Thomas L. Finch(notThomasLFinch) 2nd Place Winner: Tommy Pomeranz(trippertommy) 1st Place Winner: Rodger Kelly(Spudm) The Hottest Moments (through 10/29/07 at 1:26PM Central Time) 1. Thing 1: Train that bounces off things 2. Thing 2: "The kids like it, but I find it annoying" 3. Thing 3: When something gets stuck between the rails. Ugh! Don't want to see that! 4. Thing 4: How
