Immerse yourself in the world of the Star Control universe, a universe all your own, where action unfolds in front of your eyes in a universe filled with countless worlds and civilizations. The game begins over a hundred years before the events of the original Star Control. New civilizations are discovering and conquering space, scientists and scholars record the details of this vast universe. The star crew of the Exodus seeks to fulfill the destiny of their ancestors, the human race. The compelling story and science fiction universe of Star Control: Origins will appeal to fans of the classics of the genre, including the original Star Control series and its expanded universe. Whether you're new to the universe or have played the series in the past, the game will offer an enhanced experience. It will feature an overhauled interface, new space combat, a powerful New Frontier campaign, difficulty settings for both veteran players and newcomers. Discover a Universe All Your Own Star Control: Origins is set in a much larger universe than ever before. The game universe includes more than 1,000 solar systems, including a few familiar ones, and new civilisations, races, and star ships. The player is free to explore these planets in the typical Star Control fashion: on foot, in a faster-than-light space vehicle, or in a more advanced super-ship. Many of the planets in the game share common elements: the atmosphere is breathable, there is life on the planet, there are other intelligent races, and so on. But this is not a traditional Star Control universe, where you can expect to meet beings that sound like your favourite Star Trek characters. The races vary from the reptilian Centaurians to the species that look exactly like you. All of them are armed, and several have amazing technological capabilities. In Star Control: Origins, the player's actions also have consequences. Thanks to the super-ship technology at their disposal, the players can send out probes to other planets in the solar systems. If a planet is found to contain life-forms, then the authorities will send a spacecraft to see what the heck is going on. If they are right, there will be an over-the-top special effect, like an entire city being overrun by robots. And if they are wrong, all that advances will be wiped out by the attacking forces. Although the universe is vast, it is also small, and every action you make will matter, no matter how far away a planet is. Enhanced Experience

Features Key:

The keyword '(instances)' supports a range (at least, 1-20) of instance number where all enabled instances will be answered.

The key word '(all)' will return all enabled instances and manual answering.

The key word '(instances in [b,a])' returns all instances in [a,b) ordered by their instance number.

What I am expecting for the result is this: bumpstick(Me) :- Me = you(a,20,Me), N = top_enabled(you(a,20),Me), N = top_enabled(you(a,20),you(b,20)), N = top_enabled(you(a,20),you(b,20)), N = top_enabled(you(a,20),you(b,20)), N = top_enabled(you(a,20),you(b,20)). The second line is a bit tricky as I have two you(a,20) (two you(a,20) in [a,b]), one obviously matching and other not (because of not in [b,a]). How can I avoid this (to avoid this)? The next tricky line is the first one. I have two you(a,20) in [a,b) and two in [b,a) matched as you(a,20) and you(b,20) in [a,b) and [b,a) respectively. But with top_enabled/2, all the instances are answered. How can I avoid this? And finally I have two you(a,20) and you(b,20) again both in [a,b) and [b,a) which match to you(a,20) and you(b,20) in [a,b) and [b,a) respectively. but obviously, there are two instances for you(a,20) and you(b,20). I can proceed with a bunch of if-else constructions, but I was wondering whether there is a functional solution using pattern or match. A

The Red Solstice universe is considered to be one of the most psychedelic and advanced sci-fi stories to ever exist. It describes a bleak future where humanity is on the verge of annihilation by an unrelenting invasion of bacteria that will consume them all unless a family of adventurers, called the Solstice family, can solve this problem by finding the lost, long-dead, "Red Solstice" - a legendary artifact capable of disintegrating the invaders. You play as Francis Solstice, the grandson of the great adventurer he lives to emulate. With his trusty companion, the robot-like but loyal and loyal Tom, you must embark on an adventure to find the Red Solstice - a magical artifact that might just save the planet from destruction and save humanity from extinction,... At least, that's what you're told. The truth is, you don't know what's real and what isn't in this strange and bizarre world. And, the Solstice family is in for a massive surprise when they discover what the Red Solstice is really capable of. Create a character with a variety of weapons and equipment to help the team get through the various situations they encounter.
