I have users in MongoDB with their collections in following structure: { _id:..., collections: [{name: 'collection-name-a'} , {name: 'collection-name-b'} ...] } I also have a page that shows a list of users. Each user can have multiple collections, however each collection has a maximum of two ancestors (user in collectionA → user in collectionB) I want to loop through this list of users, and query MongoDB for each one of the collections. How would I do this? A: You can use MongoDB $in with an array of ids: db.collections.find({_id: {$in: [ObjectId() Then for each collection in each user: db.users.find({"collections.ids": {$in: [ObjectId() I'm assuming that your users collection does not have a _id property.
