Unfried says, "TV is very much alive in the U.S. and we still take in about half of all viewing in this country." He adds that while digital viewing continues to grow - giving it the smallest percentage of total viewing in the country in the past couple years - and is now growing faster than Internet viewing. "At the end of 2010, 21% of viewing was on-demand" he says. Although Internet viewing is growing rapidly, Unfried says that, when it comes to watching premium content, cable remains the dominant platform. "On-demand viewing is growing but

If you are not connected to the internet or get an error message. In 1996, when former President Bill Clinton was a presidential candidate, he was dinging rival George W. Bush about his age during an interview with CNN's Larry King. "His problem is he's older than me," Clinton said in the interview, as the network posted on its website. "I'm not gonna run against someone who's older than me, and a lot of people are older than me." Clinton was about four months younger than Bush. But in the following decade, Clinton came to believe that age was a problem for him. A review of Clinton's statements by the Clinton archive at the University of Arkansas-Fayetteville has found 43 mentions of the president's age, which could count for two presidential elections, 1996 and 2000.
