What's new:

A downloadable release of the song "Black Dive" performed by Yulia Sadovyova and Matvei Gornyi, from the soundtrack of the 3D film "Phantom" (2016), released in three variations: Original Soundtrack, Edit-Extended, and Edit-Marked. Spoiler Warning! Up to now, I've been fairly consistent in describing the reactions of each and every song in the soundtrack. But now is a special case - this song is entirely improvisational, and in that respect it's unique. It's a landmark in the history of Russian film soundtracks, because the duo behind this song - Vladimir Kolychev and Andrei Kovalenko - were in fact behind only one other song from the same soundtrack. So for the moment, it's safe to mention that the song you're about to hear was the only other one that the "Phantom 3D" soundtrack contained. Russian pop-rock duo Vladimir Kolychev and Andrei Kovalenko were well-established names since their first success in 1993-94. Long before that, though, they made a name for themselves as part of the jambandproject "Method", which was also known as "Avengers of the Universe". They've released over a dozen records and have toured the world several times, and in 2003-2007 they also released a few solo albums. But it was their lengthy collaboration with Japanese composer Ryuichi Sakamoto, which started in the late 90s, that eventually led to their triumphant return as a duo, back in 2010. They had previously collaborated on stage, but that was really all. The first time they appeared on film soundtrack was 2011, with a cover of Sakamoto's "Orpheus", for the crime thriller "City Besieged". It was a one-off, and they didn't return. - Hi, my name is Vladimir Kolychev. I want you to tell something about yourself. - Well, my name is Andrei Kovalenko, and I am from Moscow. - All right, let's talk about "Black Dive" from your new album. - We actually started working on this song around 1996, at this time, and it's built on a drum track we did the year before with another project. This drum rhythm was originally bass line to dub version of a JP-rock song, like, we used it as a bass part in our song. So the thread was there already,
