The early development of children is very important for their health and quality of life. Presently, there are no accepted definitions of the term "late-preterm birth" (preterm birth at an earlier gestational age than 34 to 36 weeks), and the term "very low birth weight" (VLBW) (birth weight under 1500 grams) is more appropriate. Both conditions increase the risk of adverse neonatal and infant outcomes. In this review, we describe the main evidence-based interventions for very low birth weight (VLBW) and late-preterm (preterm at an earlier gestational age than 34 to 36 weeks) infants, focusing on their negative impacts on health and long-term outcomes. This study was carried out through MEDLINE and PubMed searches and manual searches of the references from identified articles. We reviewed and selected studies published in English between January 1996 and October 2015. The main outcomes of the reviewed interventions in terms of health and long-term outcomes were controlled (randomized or quasi-randomized studies) and controlled clinical trials and high-quality randomized controlled trials. "
