A Virginia man claims in a federal lawsuit that once he started dating a woman, he was subjected to a slew of increasingly racist messages on dating sites and on her social media accounts. William Haseley, who is black, accuses the woman of a "campaign of systematic harassment and racist bullying" that culminated in the creation of a website that ridiculed him, and culminated in a post on his Facebook profile that said, "The coprophiliac lifestyle that you lead borders on bestiality." Haseley alleges that he and the woman were soon having intimate encounters. In his lawsuit, filed last week, Haseley claims he met the woman in early 2017 through a dating app called Tinder. Eventually they became intimate, and Haseley says they grew closer over the course of about a year. They “discussed matters of a personal nature, including marriage. The parties agreed that it was not advisable for Defendant to marry Haseley, for reasons explained to her” prior to their relationship, according to the lawsuit. And during this time, Haseley alleges, he was subjected to racial abuse. According to the lawsuit, the woman posted a “prominent advertisement on a social media website” titled “Find A Slut.” Haseley was marked as the “slut” of the ad and, according to the lawsuit, the woman posted “hundreds of messages” to her Facebook page referring to him as a “nigger” and a “stupid nigger.” Haseley also alleges that she sent him graphic messages with racial overtones. Haseley has now moved out of state. 0cc13bf012
