Synopsys Design Compiler SP1 Synopsys Design Compiler SP1Thomas Rand Thomas Rand (July 7, 1920 – October 13, 2000) was an American television producer and director who worked for CBS in the 1950s and 1960s. He was particularly notable as a director of television sitcoms, including the tag team comedy Maverick, as well as The Dick Powell Show, which he also co-created, produced and acted in, and a number of pilots for such series as The Rifleman, Rawhide, Lassie, Bonanza, The Big Valley, The Red Skelton Show, The Dick Powell Show, The Ann Sothern Show, and The Ann Jillian Show. Rand was also a director of several films. Early life Thomas Rand was born in Louisville, Kentucky, on July 7, 1920. His parents, Marion and Lucy Rand, were both actors. Rand began taking acting lessons in the early 1920s, and made his stage debut at the age of six in The Children of Darkness. Career Rand first worked on film in 1936, and appeared in The Golden West for Warner Bros., as well as The Masked Marvel for Republic Pictures. He then returned to the stage, and was in such Broadway shows as The Gay Desperado and The Lady in Question. He returned to the screen in 1939, in one of the earliest modern talkies, I Am Mad as Hell. Rand began working in television in 1951, as the associate producer of the CBS-TV series The Great Gildersleeve. He then directed two episodes in 1955, and four in 1957, as well as directing commercials for the company. He then directed 16 episodes of The Dick Powell Show, which he created in 1958, and which was based on a feature film he had made earlier that year, The Cocketeers. It was such a success that CBS ordered a series of the same name, which ran from 1959 to 1960. Rand then directed several episodes of The Dick Powell Theatre in 1960, as well as four of The Ann Sothern Show and one
