's cryptic poetry The eerie grey silhouette of Sm. Death crosses the road to our near, and the cars pause. The other side's stone seagull eyes flash between the eye of the camouflaged protagonist. As his chaste gaze steadily scours into the bushes, fleeting thoughts go through his mind. "I didn't think I was alone." "The black smoke means I'm slipping back home. I don't care to." "Maybe the fall of dark matter will raise us from the realm of the void. Even if we fall, we can still fly." The other side's rock shakes apart, and the protagonist lets out a small giggle. He steps out of the shadows, and his
