Is it possible to find out the type of a specific index of a specific array at runtime? I'm using Free Pascal if that matters, or just the regular Windows functions. My specific case: I have a System.ARRAY of INTEGERs and I need to find out the type of the second element of the array (index 1) at runtime. I can't seem to find it anywhere: (Any ideas? A: The TypeOf operator at runtime can be used to determine the type of an object, however, the information is not available at the moment of writing. Consider that for instance the Byte comparison operator is defined as: function ByteOf(B: TBytes): Byte; inline; begin Result:= int(B and $FF) - int(B shr 8); end; Which can be used for instance to determine the true bit pattern of any index of a TArray: var i, j: Byte; index: Integer; iArr: TArray; begin iArr:=...; j:= iArr[1]; j:= ByteOf(jArr[1]); end; A more common way to do this would be to use the GetElementType function of a standard Component (of Type TComponent) GetElementType(aComp,aIndex): AnsiString; Which in your specific case would provide a re-useable code for any index of any array. The hippocampal slice preparation retains a great deal of its morphology and physiological responsiveness during prolonged superfusion. This allows investigation of synaptic transmission and morphological plasticity, that have been shown to occur in vivo, to be studied in a relatively simple preparation for studies of synaptic plastic
