A: If you run the following command, this will open the Registry Editor and show you the values for the "Reset.exe". This is a batch file that will run and open the registry. You can then search for and delete all registry values for "Reset.exe". Reboot and then you should be back to the original settings. HKLM\Software\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Run\Reset.exe so the investors would have been paying out to themselves rather than contributing to the pilot. The conditions of the license include a number of requirements that must be met, including that "a minimum of 10% of the trainees in the program will have musculoskeletal disorders or musculoskeletal conditions." All the same, there were signs of a disconnect between how the goals of the program should be viewed and the goals of the companies that were considering it as a recruitment tool. Back at BART's headquarters, Julian Hawkins, executive director of operations for the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District, was not pleased at all that the pilot was moving ahead without his agency's approval. He had been engaged on the pilot as it was being developed, and he made it clear that the employment of staff trained in the pilot would have a cost impact on BART, which runs the vast majority of the region's train service. "We didn't expect this sort of thing from BART," he told SFist. Hawkins wasn't actually happy about how the program was presented to the organization either. He thought the program was too small and wasn't broad enough in terms of training opportunities for workers. He also expressed surprise at the decision to back a limited number of workers, when the number of trainees needed would be expected to increase over the entire year. "We weren't told this was what we were getting into," he said. A document from the City and County of San Francisco also indicates that some officials were not happy with the plan. The document reveals the conditions under which it was issued, including a commitment that 'city agencies may not discriminate or retaliate against anyone participating in this program. Employees may not work for any company that has received funding for the program without written approval from the participating agency.' On July 8, 2011, Mayor Ed Lee of San Francisco approved a resolution, also known as the "City Resolution," which waived all building and safety regulations for the program. The approval gave BART the green light to proceed, which it did in
