I am using Akeeba backup and I have downloaded an old backup of my site with Joomla 3.4 I need to now migrate the site from the 3.4 version to 3.6 with only the custom modules that I have installed in that old site. The problem is that every time I try to upload the backup I get an error that is reported by Akeeba that states that there are no extensions installed on this site. I have already created an installation using the Akeeba backup, I have tried to upload it with all the extensions listed on Akeeba connected to this installation but I always get the same error. Anyone has an idea of what could be happening here? I do not have any access to Akeeba any longer to help me in fixing this issue. A: I found the solution to the problem that I had. In the Akeeba database I found 3 tables that were missing and they contained a list of the mods. I was having problems with the site and according to the Akeeba teams that I talked to, this was a common issue with 3.6 installation and they could not provide a solution. Once I imported the mod_addons table into the 3.6 site I started getting errors as the Akeeba system is a bit confused. However I was able to get it working. Now I'm having 2 problems, first of all, I was able to recover a

The influence of sexual socialization of Wistar rats, male and female, on their sexual behavior and sexual reproduction with female rats at an advanced age was studied. Induction of sexual socialization (with sexually active males) or exposing animals to females with sexual activity for 9-12 months led to a marked increase in the inter-familiar aggression in males and females, sexual activity in males, an increase in the frequency of vaginal closure in females and the number of embryos and pups born to females.Ionic and biochemical mechanisms of nitrate-induced thermogenesis in chickens. The aim of this study was to quantify effects of systemic NaNO3 on absolute heat production in chickens, and the mechanisms involved in the thermogenic response to NaNO3 were examined. Male and female chickens from two strains, broiler and layer, were used. Net O2 consumption, body temperature, and respiratory rate were measured over a 2-h period. At the end of the study, tissues were removed for determination of hepatic and muscle carnitine palmitoyl transferase (CPT) activity. NaNO3 increased heat production by approximately 15%. The increase occurred within 5 min, maximized in approximately 20 min, and returned to control values within 60 min. Body temperature increased by approximately 1 6d1f23a050
