I tried this code, but the function dtz() doesn't work: def z2(x): return dtz(x) It only calls the function z() directly, not using double brackets. A: In a comment you've stated you are using Python 2.7.8. With Python 3.x, dtz is a builtin function of the datetime module. There's no need to define a new function using the double bracket notation. You could then use datetime.timedelta with or without the keyword argument, depending on your needs. U.S. military apologizes for helicopter noise affecting Afghan villagers WASHINGTON (Reuters) - U.S. forces apologized on Monday for helicopters making loud noise at night in the northwestern Afghan province of Badghis where an international force is training Afghan security forces to fight the Taliban.

"We acknowledge that the helicopter noise is disrupting the lives of the local population, and we apologize," U.S. Forces-Afghanistan spokesman Lieutenant Colonel Christopher Garver told reporters in a briefing. "Anytime we have a conflict, regardless of the past, when there is a new force on the ground, there is always a learning curve," he added. He said that the U.S. military in the past has been involved in a process to try to reduce the noise. The U.S. Embassy in Kabul, the U.S. forces in Afghanistan, and NATO's International Security Assistance Force have not commented on the incident. Garver said that U.S. forces in the area were not the only source of the noise. "The reality is there is a lot of helicopter noise in the vicinity. But the other issue is the U.S. military is not the only source of helicopter noise." But he said that the U.S. military made "extraordinary" efforts to reduce the impact on civilian life in the area. "It is a shared responsibility with the Afghan government to ensure that the population is not adversely impacted by the war," Garver
