Kojur. with the Great Southern Pioneer Railway in 1911, they were succeeded by rolling stock from the Australasian Steam Shipping Company. The station closed with the line in 1937. The Sydney-Hamilton branch was linked to the main line at Picton in the mid-1860s, and was extended to Macarthur in 1867. The connection was through a branch line, which was worked by the South Coast Railway. In the early days, the station was made up of a number of stores, a hotel and an iron bridge over the line. The single-road, Picton-Hurlstone Park section of the line opened in 1869, and a branch to Macarthur Bay was built in 1871. The first locomotive entered service in 1874. The Great Southern Railway closed the Macarthur to Hurlstone Park
