On its last flight, the China Eastern Airlines aircraft made a safe landing at Guangzhou Baiyun International Airport in China, according to a press release Tuesday from China Eastern Airlines. The plane was carrying 164 passengers, including 149 Chinese nationals and 15 foreign nationals, it said. The Los Angeles Times reported that the airline said there were 154 people on board -- 148 Chinese citizens and six foreign nationals -- along with nine crew members. Other victims included three children traveling with the family of a student at Bunker Hill Community College in North Kansas City, Mo , who had boarded the flight in Kansas City, Mo. Only one other person was flown to the hospital in serious condition. The media reported that the flight was climbing at around the same time as the plane that crashed off the coast of Indonesia. Although the China Eastern Airlines flight was climbing about 120 miles per hour and headed for an altitude of 34,000 feet, a speed of about 220-230 miles per hour was estimated by the pilot. The airline said there was no indication of any technical problems with the aircraft. According to the Chinese news reports the aircraft was flying at about 6,000 feet at the time of the crash. According to the Washington Post , two disasters were reported by flight tracking service Flightradar24. Both of those accidents occurred in Bangladesh on Friday, May 19 at about 6:28 AM local time. One plane crashed in Chittagong Hill Tracts and the other in the Haze . Neither plane registered a distress signal and both accidents remain under investigation.

the airline's safety review is just one part of a broader faa examination of the flight's history. the agency is looking at all of the boeing 787's global flights, including those as far back as the 2013 delivery of the aircraft to japan's all nippon airways, according to people familiar with the matter. this video shows the actual crack in the window. instead of liquid, it appears to be the vapor from a liquid. when i first noticed it, i thought maybe it was just a normal crack and the liquid was just dripping from it. but then i checked the window and sure enough, it was dripping. first, united airlines has been fined $50,000 for flying with a passenger who assaulted a flight attendant. this could have been prevented by wearing masks, which are not mandatory in the united states. the airline is also threatened with jail time and fines of up to $15,000 for not ensuring passengers wear masks. in a statement, the department of transportation said, "we are implementing this new policy in order to provide our safety inspectors with the tools they need to identify and deter unruly passengers in flight and on the ground. we are not telling airline passengers what to do or not to do. we are telling airline passengers what will happen if they don't do something. after all, when it comes to our air travelers, we know you love your family, and we expect you to do whatever you need to do to keep them safe." the latest issue of the federal register states that the policy states that an faa flight crew member's decision to remove a disruptive passenger from the flight is not subject to review by an faa inspector. 5ec8ef588b
