Adhesive sheets or adhesive tapes for bonding or sealing, which have been widely used and are incorporated in many uses, are required to have heat-sensitive adhesiveness, and various heat-sensitive adhesive compositions have been proposed. However, conventional heat-sensitive adhesive compositions are unsatisfactory in heat resistance and other physical properties. For example, an adhesive tape using a heat-sensitive adhesive composition comprising an adduct of a polyfunctional isocyanate and an epoxy compound is excellent in heat resistance and adhesiveness when first contacted with a substrate but is poor in adhesiveness when exposed to heat for a long period of time. Accordingly, it has been desired to develop a heat-sensitive adhesive composition which undergoes complete curing at the use temperature thereof, i.e., is excellent in heat resistance
