Cracking Adobe Photoshop is a bit more involved, but it can be done. First, you'll need to download a program called a keygen. After the keygen is downloaded, run it and generate a valid serial number. Then, launch Adobe Photoshop and enter the serial number. You should now have a fully functional version of the software. Just remember, cracking software is illegal and punishable by law, so use it at your own risk.

Particularly for designers who produce graphics for the Web, version 20 has new editing tools and design tools that are now made using the same screen layout and the same interface as on your web browser. Aperture and Photoshop share many of the same features. A pull-down menu on the left-hand side of the interface gives you access to all the Aperture tools, like the ability to import files from your iOS device, import editing settings, export, and create a two-column view of your project. You also get the same filters and presets that you'd find in Lightroom. The right side of the interface has the Photoshop features, like new editing tools that are made to work like the standard features in Photoshop. You can use the Clipper tool to make selections, gather and merge individual sections, and create a path between the groups. You can also apply a Brush tool to your selection to create a new mask, or create a collection tool. The new tools work with most of Photoshop's tools, including the Clone Stamp tool, which lets you pull up a similar area of an image from any place in the original. The latest edition of Photoshop, the industry standard for image editing and design, is available on iPad. Adobe promises this update will sweep away some of the complexity that has made Design and Silhouettes unavailable for users who don't have Macs or PCs with Windows. Gone are the more than 60 and it prompts the user to "bound to the Layers in the document." Other improvements include responsive design and a more consistent UI between the tablet and desktop versions.

We're continuing our coverage of the Virtual Human Interactions Conference, which was held in Amsterdam last week. Readers might recall that last year, we reported on how scientists from Amsterdam have developed a way to use motion capture to create a digital avatar and then control the virtual body with a joystick. There are over a dozen teams who are using virtual avatars and human controllers for remote experiments, and the video above gives a good sense of the possibilities.

In addition to the motion control work, we also recently covered the results of a Virtual Reality (VR) study, which found that VR can induce feelings of empathy and compassion in people. Now researchers are starting to use robots as human controllers and as tools to test the limits of emotions in VR environments, often using humans to do things robots can't do, like get up to a session's main stage and assist a talk to get picked up.
